LEARNING AND DEVELOPMENTAL OUTCOMES: DOMAINS, DIMENSIONS, AND EXAMPLES

INTEGRATING CAS AND LEARNING RECONSIDERED OUTCOMES¹

The Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education (CAS) promotes standards to enhance opportunities for student learning and development from higher education programs and services. Responding to the increased shift in attention being paid by educators and their stakeholders from higher education inputs (i.e., standards and benchmarks) to the outcomes of students attending higher education, in 2003 CAS articulated sixteen domains of learning outcomes. However, in 2008 after the publication of Learning Reconsidered 2 (2006), CAS reviewed the learning outcomes it had promoted and decided an integration of both learning outcome documents would enhance the profession's efforts in promoting student learning and development. Consequently, CAS hosted a "think tank" involving writers of Learning Reconsidered 2, CAS directors, and prominent practitioners and faculty members in student affairs to make recommendations for a revised learning outcomes document.

Upon recommendations of the think tank, CAS revised the student learning and development outcomes into six broad categories (called domains): knowledge acquisition, construction, integration and application; cognitive complexity; intrapersonal development; interpersonal competence; humanitarianism and civic engagement; and practical competence. To comply with CAS standards, institutional programs and services must identify relevant and desirable learning from these domains, assess relevant and desirable learning, and articulate how their programs and services contribute to domains not specifically assessed. For each of the domains, CAS offers examples illustrating achievement of the student learning outcomes.

This learning outcomes model further defines or clarifies each of the six domains by identifying learning outcome dimensions. Offering dimensions of learning within corresponding domains allows for a more focused assessment approach based on institutional mission and priorities. The revised CAS learning outcomes document heightens the differentiation of interpersonal competence and intrapersonal development (though certainly the two influence each other), highlights the integration of humanitarianism and civic engagement, and adds the dimensions of global perspective and technological competence to important learning outcomes.

The CAS Board of Directors reviewed and approved the six domains, learning outcome dimensions, and examples of learning and development outcomes at its October 2008 meeting. The domains and learning outcome dimensions will be embedded in each functional area standard. The examples will be referenced in each functional area standard and will appear in the 7th edition of the CAS Professional Standards for Higher Education.

STUDENT OUTCOME DOMAINS ²	DIMENSIONS OF STUDENT OUTCOME DOMAINS	EXAMPLES OF LEARNING AND DEVELOPMENT OUTCOMES FOR EACH OF THE STUDENT OUTCOMR DOMAINS
Knowledge acquisition, construction, integration, and application	Understanding knowledge from a range of disciplines Connecting knowledge to other knowledge, ideas, and experiences Constructing knowledge Relating knowledge to daily life	Possesses knowledge of human cultures and the physical world; possesses knowledge of (a specific) one or more subjects Uses multiple sources of information and their synthesis to solve problems; knows how to access diverse sources of information such as the internet, text observations, and databases Personalizes learning; makes meaning from text, instruction, and experience; uses experience and other sources of information to create new insights; generates new problem-solving approaches based on new insights; recognizes one’s own capacity to create new understandings from learning activities and dialogue with others Seeks new information to solve problems; relates knowledge to major and career decisions; makes connections between classroom and out-of-classroom learning; articulates career choices based on assessment of interests, values, skills, and abilities; provides evidence of knowledge, skills, and accomplishments resulting from formal education, work experience, community service, and volunteer experience, for example in resumes and portfolios
